The Gratitude Circle is a 30-foot diameter circle of natural stones set into grade at a height to allow seating and incised at the cardinal points by steel panels with space to acknowledge the generosity of financial donors to Play Conejo. Prominently located at Conejo Recreation and Park District's most popular park, Conejo Creek North, the Gratitude Circle is a simple, natural, and utilitarian improvement to the facility.

Inspired by Vietnam War Memorial's architect Maya Lin's Peace Chapel, the Gratitude Circle honors, celebrates and recognizes community members and businesses as supporters of their local parks by monetary contributions to Play Conejo with an inscribed plaque at one of the cardinal location walls.

Play Conejo was created in 2012 as part of the Conejo Recreation & Park District's 50th Anniversary to provide volunteer, charitable, and financial support for public park facilities and recreation programs which benefit Conejo Valley residents. Play Conejo will raise funds to help the District maintain quality parks and offer diverse and affordable recreation programs. Donations to Play Conejo through the Gratitude Circle help place a child into a recreation program and improve your local parks. For more information, please contact Play Conejo at playconejo.org or 805-495-6471.
